MUMU, A CLASSIC RUSSIAN STORY

Grade 7 | A2+-B1 | Mumu Part 2: The Final Chapter

The Final Chapter of Mumu

Reading Circle: Part 2

Gerasim became deeply depressed. But a day later, the dog came back to him with a broken piece of rope around her neck!

Gerasim understood that the lady was behind this (the servants explained what happened in the lady's room using hand signs). He decided to lock Mumu in his room during the day and only let her out at night. Soon, everyone knew Mumu was back, but they kept Gerasim's secret.

One night, Mumu smelled a stranger in the alley and barked. The lady was just falling asleep after eating too much. The loud bark gave her a nervous breakdown. She cried and complained that "everyone left her, a poor old woman, that nobody cares about her, and everyone wants her dead." The scared butler swore the dog would soon be dead. The lady drank her calming medicine and fell fast asleep.

In the morning, the lady ordered the dog to be killed. Gavril went to Gerasim and explained with hand signs that Mumu had to die, or there would be big trouble. Gerasim decided to do the job himself.

The Death of Mumu

Putting on his best coat, Gerasim gave Mumu a good meal at a local tavern. Then, he took a boat and rowed to the middle of the river. He said goodbye to his only friend, tied a rope with heavy bricks around Mumu's neck, and threw her into the water.

"Gerasim heard nothing—neither the quick cry of falling Mumu, nor the heavy splash of water. For him, the noisiest day was as silent and soundless as the quietest night is to us."

The other servants thought Gerasim was "weird." They couldn't understand why he was so sad over a little dog.

Gerasim Returns to His Village

After returning home, Gerasim quickly packed his things and walked all the way back to his home village. Nobody was waiting for him there, but he hurried with "a kind of unbreakable courage, a desperate but happy determination."

Three days later, he arrived. The village leader welcomed him happily. In Moscow, they looked for Gerasim for a long time. When the lady found out he was in the village, she wanted to bring him back. But then she changed her mind, saying she “never needed such an ungrateful person.” Soon after, the lady died, and her heirs didn’t care about Gerasim.

Gerasim lived out his days alone in his old, little house. He never looked at women again, and he never kept another dog.
